

Sub-Zero & Wolf Kitchen For The Duke & Duchess of Cambridge

Luxury kitchen appliance brands Sub-Zero & Wolf have recently been installed in Kate and Will's Sandringham country home, Anmer Hall, in Norfolk.

The young couple removed a hand-built traditional kitchen, complete with traditional country range, to replace it with a cutting edge, state-of-the-art design, including Sub-Zero & Wolf appliances; which are reported to have also been installed at their Kensington Palace home.

Along with Sub-Zero refrigeration, Wolf built-in wall ovens have been installed with Wolf warming drawers and a 5 burner induction cooktop.

Chef food writer and Saturday Telegraph columnist Rose Prince says, “Kate faces the unusual predicament in that her country kitchen will often need to be used semi-professionally for large parties. No private chef likes to use an Aga – there’s not enough room on the hob or in the ovens and they can lose heat at a crucial moment. She’s sensibly going for modern, state of the art cooking appliances”.

Cultural commentator Peter York believes the royal couple are creating a statement kitchen, “It says we are modern and have global taste rather than sentimental English country taste. I think it’s a good sign that they want to live in the kitchen themselves. All this Sub-Zero & Wolf stuff is global billionaire taste. I think you have a coming together of taste – modern rich people all lust after the same thing. And why not?”.

About Sub-Zero and Wolf

*Founded in 1945 and headquartered in Madison, Wis., Sub-Zero, Inc., is the leading manufacturer of American-made luxury refrigeration, freezer and wine storage products. Specializing in food preservation, Sub-Zero pioneered the concept of dual refrigeration and prides itself on being the first company to store frozen foods at ultralow, “sub-zero” temperatures. In 2000, Wolf Appliance, Inc., the premier maker of ranges, ovens, cooktops and grills, was acquired by Sub-Zero, establishing the brands as corporate companions and kitchen soul mates. In its third generation of family ownership, the privately held company also operates manufacturing facilities in Fitchburg, Wis., and Goodyear, Ariz. Both brands are continually recognized for the highest achievements in refrigeration and cooking innovation and customer satisfaction.
